A future of self-driving cars challenge the iron laws of real estate: location no longer matters

The dawn of the driverless car promising a utopia of stress-free commutes, urban playgrounds and the end of parking hassles threatens to complicate the calculus for anyone buying property.

A wide-angle shot of a large industrial warehouse. The floor is polished and reflective. On the left, a long line of white SUVs is parked, facing away from the camera. On the right, a larger number of white sedans are parked, facing towards the camera. Each car has a white sensor dome on its roof. A person in a white shirt and dark pants is walking down the central aisle. In the background, there are large roll-up doors and a yellow sign that reads "SAFETY IS OUR RESPONSIBILITY".
